Multivariable Mathematics combines linear algebra and multivariable mathematics in a rigorous approach. The material is integrated to emphasize the recurring theme of implicit versus explicit that persists in linear algebra and analysis. In the text, the author includes all of the standard computational material found in the usual linear algebra and multivariable calculus courses, and more, interweaving the material as effectively as possible, and also includes complete proofs.
* Contains plenty of examples, clear proofs, and significant motivation for the crucial concepts.
* Numerous exercises of varying levels of difficulty, both computational and more proof-oriented.
* Exercises are arranged in order of increasing difficulty.

Taking a mechanistic approach that emphasizes the physical behavior of rubber as it slides, Analyzing Friction in the Design of Rubber Products and Their Paired Surfaces integrates the engineering and scientific evidence demonstrating that the laws of metallic friction do not apply to rubber. The book also presents a newly developed, scientifically based unified theory of rubber friction that incorporates a fourth basic rubber friction force: surface deformation hysteresis. With applications that phenomenologically treat both static and dynamic rubber friction, the book offers practical guidance for implementing the unified theory in the analysis and design processes. The use of this theory enables comprehensive calculations of rubber friction, thereby offering opportunities to enhance public safety. While the theory applies to all elastomeric products where friction is an issue, the author primarily focuses on:
• Analyzing friction in the design of rubber tires and their contacted pavements
• The geometric design of roadways
• Motor vehicle accident reconstruction
• Analyzing slip resistance in the design of footwear and their contacted walking surfaces
Supported by extensive analytical evidence, this book details what rubber friction is and why it behaves the way it does.
