As the University of Texas presents the Mexican American Experience writes: Jose Antonio Villarreal discusses his 1959 novel, Pocho, and the ways in which his own life and politics influenced his writing. Villarreal first discusses his experiences growing up in the pre-World War II era in California. He traces some of the similarities between his own life and that of his character, Richard Rubio, but he stresses that his novel is not a biography.

authentic social and psychological journey. Physically we move from the most impoverished barrios of Ciudad Juarez to the power centers of the American business world; psychologically we trace the unsentimental education of an ingenuous and noble, albeit streetwise, enfant sauvage of the Mexican subproletariat.

A vexed figure inhabits U.S. literature and culture: the visibly racialized immigrant who disavows minority identity and embraces the American dream. Such figures are potent and controversial, for they promise to expiate racial violence and perpetuate an exceptionalist ideal of America. Swati Rana grapples with these figures, building on studies of literary character and racial form. Rana offers a new way to view characterization through racialization that creates a fuller social reading of race. Situated in a nascent period of ethnic identification from 1900 to 1960, this book focuses on immigrant writers who do not fit neatly into a resistance-based model of ethnic literature. Writings by Paule Marshall, Ameen Rihani, Dalip Singh Saund, Jose Garcia Villa, and Jose Antonio Villarreal symbolize different aspects of the American dream, from individualism to imperialism, assimilation to upward mobility. The dynamics of characterization are also those of contestation, Rana argues. Analyzing the interrelation of persona and personhood, Race Characters presents an original method of comparison, revealing how the protagonist of the American dream is socially constrained and structurally driven.

Uncovers the long history of how Latino manhood was integral to the formation of Latino identity In the first ever book-length study of Latino manhood before the Civil Rights Movement, Before Chicano examines Mexican American print culture to explore how conceptions of citizenship and manhood developed in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. The year 1848 saw both the signing of the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo that ended the U.S. Mexican War and the year of the Seneca Falls Convention, the first organized conference on women ' s rights in the United States. These concurrent events signaled new ways of thinking about U.S. citizenship, and placing these historical moments into conversation with the archive of Mexican American print culture, Varon offers an expanded temporal frame for Mexican Americans as long-standing participants in U.S. national projects. Pulling from a wide-variety of familiar and lesser-known works—from fiction and newspapers to government documents, images, and travelogues—Varon illustrates how Mexican Americans during this period envisioned themselves as U.S. citizens through cultural depictions of manhood. Before Chicano reveals how manhood offered a strategy to disparate Latino communities across the nation to imagine themselves as a cohesive whole—as Mexican Americans—and as political agents in the U.S. Though the Civil Rights Movement is typically recognized as the origin point for the study of Latino culture, Varon pushes us to consider an intellectual history that far

Bibliography I. Introduction This term paper deals with two pieces of American immigrant literature of different culture, political background, time and setting. The novel “ Pocho ” by Jose Antonio Villareal published in 1959 was the first Chicano novel. It was written primarily for an Anglo-American audience in order to explain the life of a “ Pocho ” . Villareal wrote the novel without any guideline as no one had entered this “ political vacuum ” before.¹ The novel “ Mona in the Promised Land ” by the Chinese-American writer Gish Jen published in 1996 introduces us into the multicultural life of the predominantly Jewish New York suburb of Scarshill in 1968. I will show in this term paper that despite the many differences in the two novels there also are many commonalities and parallels what life and the problems between the two protagonists and their parents concerns. I will furthermore try to present in detail that the familiar sorrow in both novels is closely connected with the complex conflict of generations within two cultures, as well as the protagonist ' s search for identity that results from this. In the first part I will analyze Richard ' s changing relationship towards his parents. In the second part I will show that also Mona despite her completely different background and environment faces similar problems which finally lead to the break up with predominantly her mother. Furthermore I will expose that Mona and Richard share common interests and ways. At the end of my work I will finally compare the parallels but also show differences between the two novels. II. Novel The term “ Pocho ” is an expression for a Mexican who is born and raised in the United States. It is used with an abusive connotation to describe Mexican Americans in the USA. “ Pochos ” are often perceived by Mexicans to be badly-educated and without a proper sense of culture. Jose Antonio Villarreal ’ s novel “ Pocho ” is set after the Mexican Revolution of 1910 when millions of Mexicans migrated to the USA in order to get work by the so-called first “ Bracero-Program ” .
