The family, that most fundamental of human groups, is currently perceived to be changing in response to social, biological, cultural and technological developments in our postmodern society. While the observed changes in families have been considered by some sociologists to be evidence of adaptation and, therefore, normal, the authors of this volume, consider them maladaptive.

Viewing society from the Perceiving a need to obtain information about family functioning that might lead to the increased stability and well-being of this critically important type of

The primary challenge of delivering and evaluating family-based services lies in successfully assessing changes in families. This for use of the Family Assessment Form (FAF), an instrument to help practitioners assess families at the beginning of service, develop individualized family

To service plans, monitor family progress, and assess outcomes for individual families. The FAF is designed as a standardized form that is adaptable for a variety of clinical, procedural, and program needs. Using a 9-point rating scale for individual items, the FAF enables practitioners to complete a psychosocial assessment of six areas of family functioning that is recorded in a quantitative manner and allows for monitoring family progress. The six areas of family functioning assessed by the FAF are: (1) living conditions; (2) financial conditions; (3) support available to caregivers; (4) interactions between
