Swartz shows just how hard it can be to replicate nature's greatest creation-- a human heart. Part investigative journalism, part medical mystery, she covers fifty years of false starts, abysmal failures, and miraculous triumphs, as experienced by one of the world's foremost heart surgeons, O.H. "Bud" Frazier. At the Texas Heart Institute, the roadblocks to success-- medical setbacks, technological shortcomings, government regulations-- are immense. Swartz follows the history of heart surgery, the first heart transplant, and the artificial heart while following Frazier's quixotic quest. -- adapted from publisher info.

A single letter stock ticker symbol is a limited resource - only 26 possibilities are available in a stock universe of over 475,000 possible one, two, three or four letter ticker symbols. These elite symbols were first allocated based on trading volume therefore some of the most important companies were initially placed into this group. Whether it was intentional or not, these firms represented the largest and most important companies of their day. This paper documents a decline in the prominence of these firms due to a natural turnover in commercial leadership and no established mechanism to remove the single letter designation from firms that lost their prominence. Until the 1960s, this group of stocks retained its relative importance as revealed by the maintenance of a significant relative market capitalization and a stable inclusion ratio in the Dow Jones Industrial Average. In the subsequent period, these stocks have lost relative market value and importance and the recognition of these firms has declined. Many of the once-coveted single-letter ticker symbols are vacant and the certification value of a single-letter ticker symbol has diminished.

Long overlooked in histories of finance, women played an essential role in areas such as banking and the stock market during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Yet their presence sparked ongoing controversy. Hetty Green's golden touch brought her millions, but she outraged critics with her rejection of domesticity. Progressives like Victoria Woodhull, meanwhile, saw financial acumen as more important for women than the vote. George Robb's pioneering study sheds a light on the financial methods, accomplishments, and careers of three generations of women. Plumbing sources from stock brokers' ledgers to media coverage, Robb reveals the many ways women invested their capital while exploring their differing sources of information, approaches to finance, interactions with markets, and levels of expertise. He also rediscovers the forgotten women bankers, brokers, and speculators who blazed new trails--and sparked public outcries over women's unsuitability for the predatory rough-and-tumble of market capitalism. Entertaining and vivid with details, Ladies of the Ticker sheds light on the trailblazers who transformed Wall Street into a place for women's work.

Marvin Wineski is a washed-up Vietnam War veteran who gets a second chance at life. He grudgingly participates in the New York City ticker tape parade in honor of Vietnam vets. This one event is the catalyst for all that follows. With the unexpected support of someone from his past, his journey will take him back to Vietnam to find his true purpose. If you believe in second (and third or even fourth) chances, like I do, then join Marvin on his quest to rebuild a life that was hijacked by war.

The End of time will come all of a sudden. The holy Qur'an tells us that it will appear to people as if they have tarried a single evening on Earth. The knowledge of the final Hour is with the Almighty God alone. When the Hour comes the moon would be cleft asunder. The serious question at this stage is how prepared are we for the final Hour; the exact timing of it, as mentioned already, is only known to the Almighty God, the most exalted and has not reveal it to any one. Mass production and mass organisation have blinded mankind, societies and nations. Mankind has become so engrossed in material things to the extent that they take no notice of the signs of the final Hour that are now evident every where. Instead mankind has chosen to waste precious time in ephemeral things. A brave soldier, who left his sword behind in his house and went out to fight with the scabbard: Indeed, any one who forgets the Day of meeting with his or her creator, will go empty handed into the Eternal Home and face the wrath of God on the Judgement Day.
