Walker has worked in film before - his first
short, The Lost Explorer, premiered in 2010 - yet he downplays the cinematic quality of his work: "films are story-led, whereas photographs are mood-led; they're completely different careers really." Yet the evidence on display at Storyteller contradicts him.

Walker is our modern day Cecil Beaton, mirroring Beaton's opulence and decadence, capturing and creating society women against backdrops of stately halls. And boy does he love a grand hall - Glemham Hall in Suffolk, Eglington Hall and Howick Hall in Northumberland, locations he returns to again and again.

And, in that sense, Story Teller is a fitting collection: inclusive and representative of Walker's extensive body of work and his own personality rather than reflective of the closed-off nature and widespread exclusivity of the fashion industry with which he finds himself partnered in a strange symbiosis. 'I'm more interested in who'll let me do what I want to do,' he says.

"A journey through the unique creative mind of one of the world's leading photographers, this book includes over 100 new photographs by Tim Walker, inspired by the VetA's enormous and eclectic collection, from Renaissance stained glass to an Alexander McQueen gown. Known for creating fantastical, elaborately staged images, Walker collaborates with set designers, stylists, hair and make-up artists, models and muses to bring his imagination to life. This publication celebrates these myriad creative talents and records Walker's unique processes, from his detailed research in the labyrinth of stores and galleries at the VetA South Kensington and VetA Museum of Childhood, preparatory sketches and behind-the-scenes photographs, to spectacular final pictures." -- Publisher's description.

The book contains the original short story by Patrick McGrath with film stills as well as a facsimile of the annotated shooting script.

Some kids like to dance and laugh out loud, and some sit quietly and make up stories in their heads--we're all different and that's okay, because the Maker of everything made us this way! In their first picture book, bestselling author Sally Clarkson and her son Nathan encourage children on the journey to discovering their strengths. The mother-and-son duo draws on themes from their first book, Different, the emotive story of Nathan's experiences growing up with mental illness and learning disabilities and Sally's journey to loving him unconditionally. With the powerful truth that what makes you different makes you great, Only You Can Be You will help children embrace their differences and celebrate the differences in others. The irresistible rhymes paired with Tim Warnes's whimsical illustrations encourage your children with reassurance in their own uniqueness. Plants' ability to turn sunlight into energy makes them the basis for all life; without them there is no life. And they are more than just a food source—they provide us with fuel, fibers, and pharmaceuticals. Global warming and the destruction of natural habitats are a serious threat to many plants, and there are worldwide efforts to mitigate the disaster. Plant Conservation tackles this essential topic head on. Timothy Walker, as the director of the Oxford Botanical Garden, a leader in the field of plant conservation, plays a key role in this effort. He highlights what is happening now, from cataloging the world's flora to conservation efforts like protecting plants from overcollecting. He also shows home gardeners how they can become involved, whether by growing their own food to decrease reliance on large agriculture or by making smart plant choices by growing natives and avoiding invasives. Plant Conservation treats a critical topic in an accessible and optimistic way. It is required reading for
